From Hart Publishing : Anti-Cartel Enforcement in a Contemporary Age: Leniency Religion (Hart Studies in Competition Law) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Anti-Cartel Enforcement in a Contemporary Age: Leniency Religion (Hart Studies in Competition Law):

Leniency policies are seen as a revolution in contemporary anti-cartel law enforcement. Unique to competition law, these policies are regarded as essential to detecting, punishing, and deterring business collusion; conduct that subverts competition at national and global levels. Featuring contributions from leading scholars, practitioners, and enforcers from around the world, this book is a critique of the almost universal adoption and zealous defense of leniency by competition authorities. The book charts the origins of and impetuses for the leniency movement, while capturing key insights from academic research and practical experience relating to the operation and effectiveness of leniency policies. It examines leniency from the perspectives of corporate and individual applicants, advisers, and authorities. It also explores the debates surrounding the intersections between leniency and other crucial elements of the enforcement system, such as compensation, compliance, and criminalization. The rich analysis draws on the disciplines of law, regulation, economics, criminology, and political science. It makes a substantial and distinctive contribution to the literature on a topic that is highly significant to a wide range of actors in the field of competition law and business regulation generally.  "...fundamental questions are raised and thoroughly discussed in this book which is undoubtedly the most comprehensive scholarly work on leniency policies produced so far...[the] book should be required reading for all seeking to acquire a deeper insight into the issues related to leniency policy. It is a priceless contribution..." - From the Foreword by Professor Frederic Jenny (Series: Hart Studies in Competition Law, Vol. 10) [Subject: Competition Law, Business Law, Economics, Criminal Law]

Anti-Cartel Enforcement in a Contemporary Age constitutes a very valuable volume. It challenges the too easily accepted assumptions concerning leniency and it explores many of the under-analysed questions relating to leniency's place in the broader system of enforcement. It warrants a careful read of policy-makers, competition authorities' officials and practitioners alike. (Marek Martyniszyn Concurrences) Profs Beaton-Wells and Tran assembled first-rate authors, and superbly structured the book's chapters, succeeding in making this book a must-read for both practitioners and scholars of the antitrust/competition. (Toshiaki Takigawa Symposium: Antitrust and Competition Policy Blog)...an interesting, timely, and important book. There is a tremendous variety of economic, legal, philosophical, and practical perspectives on the role of leniency policies in modern cartel enforcement in the U.S., the EU, and in other jurisdictions. (Spencer Waller Symposium: Antitrust and Competition Policy Blog)...the 16 chapters [the book] comprises are not only uniformly excellent, but they raise the right questions...It should figure on the reading list of all competition law enforcers and practitioners. (Damien Geradin Symposium: Antitrust and Competition Policy Blog) Nothing can detract from the excellent job all the contributors and the editors do in critically discussing the practical issues of leniency programmes...The book is a strongly recommended purchase for all academics and practitioners interested in antitrust enforcement issues. (Florian Wagner von Papp Symposium: Antitrust and Competition Policy Blog) Kudos to the editors and authors of [this work] for producing such an interesting, timely, and important book. There is a tremendous variety of economic, legal, philosophical, and practical perspectives on the role of leniency policies in modern cartel enforcement...Any practitioner, enforcement official, or academic involved or interested in cartel enforcement and the role of leniency will want to read this book. (Spencer Waller World Competition Law and Economics) About the Author Caron Beaton-Wells is a Professor at the Melbourne Law School, University of Melbourne.
