From Institute of Competition Law : Antitrust in Emerging and Developing Countries before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Antitrust in Emerging and Developing Countries:

Concurrences Review in partnership with New York University School of Law held the inaugural conference,

"Antitrust in Emerging and Developing Countries," in New York on October 24, 2014. Five panels of prominent speakers representing 10 jurisdictions explored the economic context and addressed the challenges and developments in competition law and policy in emerging and developing jurisdictions, in particular China, India, Mexico, Brazil and South Africa. This book collects the papers of the conference participants on unique and pressing competition issues in developing countries.
