BrilliantBy Phillip Taylor MBEANOTHER BRILLIANT BEST FRIEND FROM CPAG FOR ALL INVOLVED IN WELFARE LAW ADVICEAn appreciation by Phillip Taylor MBE and Elizabeth Taylor of Richmond Green ChambersThe Child Poverty Action Group (CPAG) continues to offer excellent support to welfare lawyers and advisers with a new, superb and comprehensive edition of the guide to the child support scheme.This new edition for 2015-2016 sets out practical examples and clear guidance for any person who is involved in advising parents on child maintenance issues.We know from previous experience that users will find this title to be another invaluable hands-on work from CPAG which is both spot-on and cost effective for its wide

audience. The Child Support Handbook sets out to answer a number of basic questions in this guide such as: who can apply for maintenance; who has to pay; how to apply and how to withdraw an application; and how maintenance is calculated to name but a few points. The book is actually surprisingly detailed and explains the following specific areas covering some of the most common points which we, as advisers, are called upon to answer. The issues include advice on: how do you apply for child support; what powers do the Child Support Agency and the Child Maintenance Service have; how is the amount of child support calculated under the different statutory schemes; when will your case be transferred to the new rules; how do you challenge a child support decision; what happens if you fail to pay child support; and how can you challenge a decision or make a complaint, and much more? Mark Brough has updated the Handbook to cover the latest changes to child support, and he has done so in a most accessible way. The 2015-16 edition remains fully indexed and cross-referenced to the relevant legislation, case law authorities and official guidance. Also, it includes practical examples, tactical hints and useful arguments in what has been described as a well written, fantastically detailed and very accurate statement for which there is no better source of information and advice. And it gives both a thorough and refreshing explanation of how the system works. Thank you CPAG again for making our task as advisers so much easier when dealing with child support matters! The law is as stated at 1st June 2015.

Our comprehensive guide to the child support scheme provides clear, practical guidance for anyone advising parents on child maintenance issues. The Child Support Handbook explains: who can apply for maintenance and who has to pay how to apply and how to withdraw an application how maintenance is calculated
