F-By Lana Koulintchenko This is not as insightful as you'd think. Definitely written for individuals who are already familiar with the terms and verbiage
Overly dramatic. Would not recommend. You can get the pdf version for $17 on google books

Winner, American Sociological Association Latino/a Section Distinguished Contribution to Research Book Award
The United States currently is deporting more people than ever before: 4 million people have been deported since 1997 twice as many as all people deported prior to 1996. There is a disturbing pattern in the population deported: 97% of deportees are sent to Latin America or the Caribbean, and 88% are men, many of whom were originally detained through the U.S. criminal justice system. Weaving together hard-hitting critique and moving first-person testimonials, Deported tells the intimate stories of people caught in an immigration law enforcement dragnet that serves the aims of global capitalism.

Deported is a novel contribution to sociology and a student-friendly text that effectively serves both scholars of the United States and scholars of global migration.
- International Migration "By drawing on the everyday experiences of deportees and connecting them to global capitalism, the neoliberal cycle, and racialized social control, Tanya Golash-Boza's work provides a much needed macro-level analysis of mass deportation."
- American Journal of Sociology
Sociologist Golash-Boza offers a provocative assessment of mass migration into the US by putting it into a larger arena where laws that restrict free migration create a global apartheid that benefits Global North elites at the expense of the laboring masses in the Global South.
- CHOICE "Tanya Golash-Boza has written a brilliant book that demonstrates the social suffering and global apartheid produced by neoliberalism, global capitalism and transnational labor markets. This book gives a human face to the problem of mass deportation and reveals the tragic consequences of mass deportation for laborers in the Americas. This book is a major contribution to immigration, social justice and human rights literature. It should be required reading for anyone interested in global capitalism, political economy, human rights and immigration."
- France Winddance Twine, co-editor of Geographies of Privilege
Golash-Boza has written a timely, provocative, insightful, and important work about mass deportation. It encompasses deeply personal often quite moving narratives from the darkest corners of the global deportation machinery, before, during, and after deportation. This book must be read by all who care about the often dreadful effects of deportation on individuals, families, and communities and especially by the policy-makers, legislators, and judges who, often uncritically, continue to craft and implement deportation from the United States and around the world.
- Daniel Kanstroom, author of Aftermath: Deportation Law and the New American Diaspora
