From Aboriginal Studies Press : Dialogue About Land Justice: Papers from the National Native Title Conferences before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Dialogue About Land Justice: Papers from the National Native Title Conferences:

With input from leading commentators and senior jurists, this account provides a solid understanding of the key problems surrounding Australia's native title. Consolidating 16 papers presented at the national Native Title Conference since the historic Mabo judgment, this inspirational compilation ties native title to the fundamental issue that is Indigenous peoples place within the Australian political and legal framework and within its national identity. With contributions about New Zealand, the United States, and the United Nations, this reference also offers a comparative understanding of international Indigenous land rights and interests.
